

DALLE DE FOIX

Dalle de Foix is a French limestone recognized for its warm, timeworn surface and natural depth. Quarried from the foothills of the Pyrenees near the town of Foix in southwestern France, it reflects the character of the region's old farmhouses and manors — stones worn smooth by centuries of use. Each slab shows tones of beige, honey, and soft grey, marked by fossil traces and hand-cut edges that reveal its origin and craft.
